

Global Journal of Media Studies

CONTENTS

Volume 12, Number 6, December 2025

FOREWORD

Climate Change, Communication, and Global Low-Carbon Transition: Opportunities and Responsibilities for China John Downey/1

CLIMATE COMMUNICATION

The Ineffectiveness of Traditional Climate Communication Framing and the Paradigm Shift to Adaptive Framing He Huang, Fangfei Wang/3

Myanmar Public's Perception of China's Climate Image: An Experimental Study Based on the "Belt and Road" Climate Narratives Jilong Wang, Yuan Zhong/21

How Climate Communication Connects the Chinese Public: Audience Segmentation and Climate Narratives Yuqi Wang, Fanxu Zeng/40

The Influence Mechanism of Climate Narratives Framework on the Low-carbon Behaviors and Intentions of Ecological Migrants in China Cairang Zhuoma, Qingxi Song/59

Information Processing of Climate Change and Reactive Low-carbon Behaviors of the Audiences Qingfeng Xie/75

AGING AND COMMUNICATION

Accidentally Corrected? Examining the Effects of Incidental Corrective Information Exposure among the Middle-aged and Elderly Chen Luo, Xinran Li, Yulong Tang/95

The Construction of Media Time and Digital Social Life among Older Adults Zijuan Zhang, Yalan Huang/115

JOURNALISM STUDIES

How Can News Break through "Algorithmic Fragmentation"? An ABT Algorithmic Auditing Study from the Perspective of News Public Visibility Wen Shi, Jiayan Lu/133

With Discourse but without Structure? The Theoretical Boundaries of Discourse Institutionalism in Journalism Studies Ye Ma, Yusi Liu/154

COMMUNICATION STUDIES

The Influence of the Frames of International Nuclear Pollution Issue on Chinese Public's Pro-environmental Behavioral Intentions Yi Liu, Yuanhang Shao, Ziyang Zheng, Xiaoyuan Jiang/173

A Study on the Psychological Mechanism of Exclusion Behavior in WeChat Moments Lin Shi, Xinru Fang/193

GLOBAL VIEW

Authenticity at the Heart of Communication Eun-Ju Lee/213